The institute at Yale is the first non-commercial educational organization to offer such a program to the public.

The effects of insect injury may be considerably more serious on corn to be used for seed than on corn to be used for feed, U. S. department of agriculture entomologists observe in their investigations on the protection of both seed and feed corn. This, says Dr. R. T. Cotton of the bureau of entomology and plant quarantine is because "the germ of the seed, with its high food value, is particularly attractive to insects. Thus species that are not of great importance, if we consider the mere quantity of the grain that they destroy, are of concern to the seedman because they feed almost exclusively on the germ."

What is probably instinctive in the insects is very much in line with recent scientific research in human nutrition which has emphasized the high food, vitamin and mineral values in grain germs, much of which is milled out in the manufacture of "white" grades of flour and meals.

The flat grain beetle, cadelle, almond moth, and Indian meal moth are some of the insects particularly destructive to seed corn. Dr. Cotton finds, because they make their first attack on the germ.

Research, and practical tests show that a three-part mixture of ethylene dichloride and carbon tetrachloride is the safest fumigant to use in protecting seed corn from insect damage.

Garden Insecticide

"Rotenone is the most valuable single garden insecticide," says Clemon extension service specialists. "Five per cent DDT dust alone or in combination with fungicides is valuable on potatoes and cabbage, but it should never be applied within a month of harvest to any leafy vegetable or to tomatoes. 'Don't handle moist plants—it spreads disease'—this warning is especially true of the members of the melon family, tomatoes, and beans, but it may apply to other crops as well. DDT dust, therefore, is easily transferred from one plant to another, and, if disease-producing organisms are present, they are widely spread."

Among the by-products of television are complaints of eye troubles by those who watch programs. Some of these problems are imaginary, but some may be actual, according to the Better Vision Institute. Persons with normal vision can get eye fatigue if they watch an object from too nearby or with the head in an uncomfortable position, and the same may apply to video-viewers. One theory is that people who report eye difficulties after watching a video screen realize they have been suffering all along from some visual error or from nearsightedness or astigmatism. They may not have noticed it before because they said they employ the eyes on activities comparable to focusing for long periods on a small screen filled with moving images.

Quarantines in Britain

From the point of view of animal health, Britain is fortunate in being an island. Such serious epidemic diseases as rinderpest, which have at times devastated the herds of other continental neighbors, have long been excluded. But in a country which imports so many animal products, strict quarantine precautions are necessary, and even the most elaborate do not always succeed. Rare outbreaks of rinderpest, mouth disease are promptly stamped out by drastic slaughtering and burning, with government compensation to the affected farmers.

NANCY HANKSES COME TOGETHER

Lady of That Name To Join Central's Crack Train For Birthday Celebration

The Nancy Hankses—that is, the lady and the train—will meet for the first time Sunday, July 17.

The date is the occasion of the Streamliner's Nancy's second birthday, and Miss Nancy Hankses, a recent graduate of Duke University, has promised to be on hand to help honor the train whose name she bears.

Central of Georgia Railway officials report that all is in readiness for the anniversary. Letters to first-day riders of the streamliner have been mailed, requesting their participation in the modest celebration aboard, and seventy-five pounds of cake have been ordered.

Miss Hankses is a native of Fort Worth, Texas, and has just graduated from Duke University, Durham, N. C. She was 1949 May Queen at Duke, member of Phi Beta Kappa, president of the Woman's Student Government Association, and president of the Regional Association for Student Government Officers. According to Edward L. Fike, director, Bureau of Public Relations at Duke, she is considered one of the outstanding graduates.

Miss Hankses was contacted several weeks ago and informed of the train's approaching birthday. In response she expressed great interest in the streamliner and said she would be on hand for the celebration.

Central of Georgia said Miss Hankses would be accompanied by someone in her family, probably her mother.

When she completes two years of operation in July, Streamliner Nancy will have handled more than 350,000 passengers on her 294-mile run serving Savannah, Macon, Atlanta and other points.

This train and her brother streamliner, Man o' War, which operates between Columbus and Atlanta, have attracted nation-wide attention since they were inaugurated in 1947 on a low-fare, luxury-equipped, multi-top basis. Put into operation as an experiment in modern transportation to serve small cities and towns, as well as the large centers, the two trains immediately caught the travel eye of the public and soon proved themselves to be needed and desired in Georgia.

Round-trip fares, five-day limit on Nancy Hankses are computed by adding only 20 per cent to the one-way fares. These fares are cheaper than the cost of gasoline to make the same trip in an automobile.

An interesting sidelight is that it costs $1,000 a day to operate the streamliner.

Good Buy—all around

FRIENDS gather, look over that long Fireball life as you have here.

They size up the broad windshield and narrow corner posts—and don't have to be told how these things step up "see-power."

They appraise the smart styling, the roomy interiors, the usability of luggage space—and agree you've made a buy.

But don't stop, please, with letting them look. Invite them in and introduce them to some of the special pleasures you'll know as a Buick owner.

Show them, for instance, how completely different Dynaflow Drive is, with every mile cushioned by flowing oil and none of the rigid harshness of direct-drive cars.

Let them sample the matchless Buick ride, with all four wheels cradled on soft, coil springs and low-pressure tires made still easier-riding by extra-wide rims.

*Standard on Roadmaster, optional at extra cost on Super models.

American Merchant Marine Faces Serious Competition

Resurgence of the merchant shipping fleets of maritime nations and the building up of such fleets by nations previously possessing little or no shipping, poses serious competitive factors for the American merchant marine in the foreign trades.

This was evident from a survey of the world's merchant fleets, highlights of which were made public by National Geographic Society's American Shipping. Among the highlights were:

Upon completion of vessel construction currently underway or on order, the world's merchant fleet of oceangoing ships of 1,000 gross tons and over will total almost 89 million deadweight, or 12% larger than in 1939, excluding U. S. government-owned tonnage.

At the beginning of 1949 a total of nearly 12 million cwt. of merchant shipping was on order or under construction in the world.

Of this amount Great Britain was building more than half; the Marshall Plan nations as a group accounted for 70 per cent; the United States only 12 per cent.

War losses in passenger ships largely used as troop transports have not been fully replaced. The United States passenger fleet (ships capable of carrying more than 100 persons) is today 51.6 per cent less than prewar. Passenger fleets of other nations have also declined, but not as severely as that of the U. S. The passenger fleet under the British flag is 27 per cent less than prewar; the Marshall Plan nation's aggregate fleet 37 per cent, and overall world passenger fleet 44 per cent.

Use of Schmidt Camera Explained by Scientists

A Schmidt camera is a type of astronomical camera, announced in 1930 by a German astronomer named Bernhard Schmidt. Light falls on a concave mirror that has the shape of part of the surface of a sphere. Such a mirror by itself cannot form a sharp image but suffers from what is called "spherical aberration" so a specially shaped lens is placed in front, according to scientists of the G. E. research laboratory. After the light rays pass through, they hit the mirror in such a way that they are focused sharply on a film between the lens and mirror.

The advantage of such a camera is that it gathers a great deal of light and at the same time can photograph a large area of the sky. The same optical system is now used in television receivers where the picture is projected on a large screen, the picture tube taking the place of the film.

Light from its face hits the mirror and is reflected through the lens to the screen. Thus the direction of the light is just opposite to that used in taking pictures but the optical effect is the same.

Insect Poisoning in Chickens

Chickens generally are able to consume insects without much danger of ill-effects. In fact, there is only one species that is definitely known to be poisonous. This is the rose chaffer, found in the eastern United States, in Canada, and as far west as Colorado. It thrives from the latter part of May to early July and seems to be palatable to chickens. Week-old chicks die after eating 15 or 20 of these insects, according to veterinarians, but birds become more resistant to the poisonous effects as they grow older. The rose chaffer harbors a toxic substance that affects the chicken's heart. Convulsions and straining of the head and neck over the back are typical symptoms. Death of poisoned birds usually occurs within 24 hours, although some recover.

Life Insurance Assets

Total life insurance assets of all U. S. companies now average $722 per policyholder, the Institute of Life Insurance reports. These assets, made up largely of the invested funds held as policy reserves, represent an indirect investment by policyholders. Another third, or $240 per policyholder, is at work for local and federal government needs through government bonds of all types. Another third, or $242 per policyholder, is at work in business and industry through corporate securities. Some $145 per policyholder is in mortgages, extending financing aid to property owners, and the balance is in miscellaneous investments.

Vitamin E Over-rated

Does the feeding of vitamin E, or wheat germ oil, boost milk and butterfat production of dairy cows? One dairy research team said it does, but now two other groups of investigators have turned up strong evidence that it does not, according to the nutrition committee of the American Veterinary medical association. "Vitamin E is one of the most controversial elements in the whole nutritional catalogue," the committee declares. "It has been touted as a remedy for many conditions in animals, but critical tests by reputable scientists have failed to substantiate most of the claims made for it."

HEALTH DIRECTOR ISSUES WARNING

Present Is Good Time To Remain Calm and Conserve Blood Pressure

"When you warn an excited person, 'Watch your blood pressure!' you are not only using a popular expression—you are literally pointing out to him that the pressure of blood in his arteries is being increased by his emotional upset, whether it be excitement, anger, fear or anxiety."

Blood pressure can be increased by the heart's beating faster or by a narrowing down of the smaller blood vessels through which the blood is pumped. Thus, everyone's blood pressure is constantly changing within certain limits, depending on whether a person is resting or physically active, emotionally calm and relaxed, or excited and under tension.

It is perfect normal for a person's blood pressure to be "high" when he runs, for example, or climbs stairs or is emotionally worked up. It is when blood pressure stays more or less constantly at a high level that a person is said to have "high blood pressure."

A person may have abnormally high blood pressure, and live a normal life for many, many years. If the pressure gets too great there is danger that one of the vessels might burst. An artery in the brain is weaker than most and this one is the one most likely to give way, resulting in what is commonly called a "stroke." Furthermore, if the blood pressure remains high for a long time it makes the heart work harder than nature intended it should to keep the blood circulating at a normal rate. This overwork may cause the heart muscle to become enlarged and weakened.

Many people in this county suffer from high blood pressure, and it is believed that the rapid pace of our existence here—hard work, intense competition, countless social activities—is a factor in some cases.

But high blood pressure can also be caused sharply on a film between the lens and mirror.

The advantage of such a camera is that it gathers a great deal of light and at the same time can photograph a large area of the sky. The same optical system is now used in television receivers where the picture is projected on a large screen, the picture tube taking the place of the film.

Light from its face hits the mirror and is reflected through the lens to the screen. Thus the direction of the light is just opposite to that used in taking pictures but the optical effect is the same.

Creasy Displays A Mammoth Pumpkin

The largest pumpkin which ever fell under the vision of this writer—and there have been many pumpkins under review in this extended span of life—was that brought to market last Friday by J. T. Creasy Sr., of the Brooklet-Denmark community.

Measured in the largest place, the vegetable was exactly seventy-two inches in circumference, and on the scales it weighed exactly 68½ pounds! And that is "some pumpkin" if you take our word for it. That there may not be any insinuation to suspect deception, Mrs. Creasy came along with her husband to testify to its genuineness. She did not quote the jungle, but her presence brought to mind the first attempt at poetry we ever memorized:

Peter, Peter, pumpkin eater, Had a wife and couldn't keep her: He put her in a pumpkin shell, And there he kept her very well.

CONTROL TOBACCO FLEAS WITH PROPER MIXTURE

Tobacco fleas can be controlled with liberal applications of 5 per cent DDT and talc. E. C. Westbrook, extension tobacco specialist, stated here Saturday after examining several growing fields of tobacco that were infested. Mr. Westbrook stated that they were hard to kill and would do damage to the tobacco materially if not controlled.

DDT and talc would be about the cheapest and safest thing to use, he thought. Fleas showed up in the local tobacco fields last week and seem to be spreading over the county. This is a new pest to worry tobacco growers.
